New perspectives merge past and present and offer insights of ourselves.

Growth requires a spontaneous desire for activity.

As the sun casts shadows,
solitude and activity
pattern our lives:
neither can exist
without the other.

The quest for understanding takes place in body, mind, and spirit.

Creativity is developed and reflected in self-expression.

Each person's awareness focuses on her own moral perspective.

Successful social beings can only be created by the development of individuals.

STUDENT LIFE

Orientation Begins New

Amid piles of luggage, girls and mothers await the arrival of baggage boys.

Helping the new girls fill out necessary forms, Candy Speir passes out room assignments.

Welcoming her to St. Mary's, Charlotte Newman gives Debbie Faraane her identification tag.

Getting acquainted, Merle Drennen, Esther Graham and Morgy Purdue discuss Orientation activities.

Obviously relaxed, three eligible young "men" enjoy participating in the Orientation Talent Show.

Life At Saint Mary's

Orientation at St. Mary's, 1971, consisted of five hat days which introduced girls to the St. Mary's campus life. "New Girls," on arrival, stood in lines, received name tags, filled out forms, and met roommates. Special activities were planned for Orientation, including a cord party and a talent show. After five days of settling in, the girls were ready for the next big event—the arrival of the Seniors.

Day Students' Activities

The day students compase an impartant part of the St. Mary's student body. Although they cammute, they take an active part in school affairs and also have projects of their awn. In addition to their annual bake sale, the senior day students had a supper for the senior boarders. They enjoy their newly re-furnished house, complete with television, kitchen, snack bar, and shag carpet.

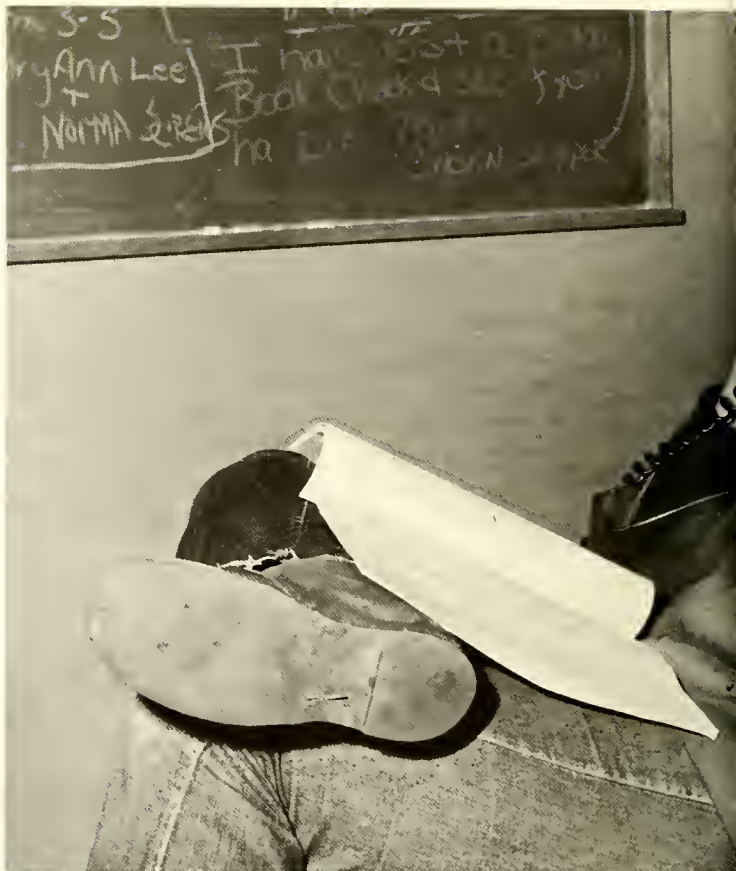

Calling a boarding student, Gory Moore discusses o class assignment.

Relaxing during a busy day, Betsy Willord and Libba Barbour watch television.

Between classes, day students enjoy congregating in their new sitting room.

The day students' annual bake sale helps feed hungry boarders.

Fathers, Daughters— Dates For The Day

Father—Daughter Day is a special day once a year when each girl's father may attend classes and participate in extra-curricular activities with his daughter. The day was full of excitement and laughter, both in the classes and with the other fathers and their daughters. The highlight of Father—Daughter Day this year was the dedication of the new Alice McKenzie Ragland classroom building. Present at the dedication of the three-story modern facility were Mrs. Ragland and members of the family, friends, alumnae, fathers, students and faculty.

A moment of affection before a day of studies and outside events on Father—Daughter Day.

Jeon Scott and her father enjoy ice-cream cones together before an exciting afternoon.

For great—distance problems, a substitute "Poppo" come in handy.

After an enjoyable lunch, Solly Pisoni chats with her father during a brief moment between Father—Daughter Day activities.

Fathers gather with daughters in a short service uniting love and spiritual aspirations.

John Bondeson, Dr. Frank W. Pisoni, John M. Biggs, and architect, Arthur McKimmon speak about the almost-completed Alice McKenzie Ragland classroom building on Father—Daughter Day.

"Little Mary Sunshine "

Little Mary Sunshine, a delightful musical comedy was performed in the St. Mary's auditorium on October 28-29. It was an interdepartmental production with many members of the art department, music department, and the drama club participating. Male members of the cast were brought in from the Raleigh community.

Farest rangers bow politely to little Mary.

A group of young ladies from the finishing school enjoy rehearsing the Moto Hori scene.

The girls gather for a challenging game of croquet.

In a final scene of the play, Jonet Lassiter, as "little Mary" sings to Stephen Leogue.

At practice, Jeonne Charles, an opera star with a German accent sings a love song to Mr. Roberts.

Seniors Entertain Juniors With Halloween Festivities

The Halloween celebration, sponsored by the Seniors, took place in a haunted house formally known as the gym. Ghouls and ghosts entered by climbing through a "tunnel" and being thoroughly doused with straw. Refreshments, babbling for apples, and a cake-walk added to the festivities. But the most exciting event was the appearance of certain "members of the faculty" in disguise. Students enjoyed throwing pies at the SGA officers.

Three typical SMJC girls stand in line to have their fortunes told.

A "baby-doll" waits patiently for the festivities to begin. Rolling, a group of girls enjoy the Halloween party.

Togetherness at Christmas

The Christmas season at St. Mary's is filled both with the excitement and anticipation of the upcoming holidays and the anxiety of impending examinations. Girls decorate their halls and rooms in a festive spirit.

Anxiously awaiting Christmas cards, girls gather around the post office in Lower Smedes.

Celebrating Christmas with a needy family created an extra abundance of spirit for the girls on first Cruik.

Before the holidays, girls spent a lot of time preparing for exams.

Third Smedes peanuts discovered shells at the annual hall party.

Christmas is a time of joy and happiness in being together.

Academics Create Tension Yet Encourage Discipline.

Progressive educational program in terms of Christian character and service, distinguished records of student honors, excellent library facilities, and an honor system are all a part of the academic life at Saint Mary's.

Carefully measuring the chemicals, Merrie Carol Moore prepares for another chemistry lab.

Ginny Blockfard spends many hours working on a second semester term paper.

Fresh, autumn air opens minds after a hard day of classes.

Ellisian Ainsworth learns that studying is an important aspect in the life of the girls at Saint Mary's.

Caca McCannell, Phyllis Williamsan and Kathryn Scatt take a break from studying and enjoy the friendly atmosphere of Lower Smedes.

Comfortably propped up, Elizabeth Propst takes another night of studying.

Playtime at St. Mary's

Life at St. Mary's is much more than just academics. Close friends are made as we learn to live together and share our lives. Through our experiences with each other, we grow.

The lights of "the airport" are a familiar sight as we return from dates.

To Sarah Helen Zimmerman, there's nothing like a long-awaited phone call from a special friend.

Every hall has its own favorite fun—an first Penick, it's television parties.

Third Smedes girls keep in top shape with nightly exercise. Susan Capahart has many kinds of friends.

Daisies do tell, and this one reflects the anticipation of a date.

FACULTY AND ADMINISTRATION

Decade of Renewal

During interviews, Alice Anne Horne, Dean of Admissions always helps make potential students feel at ease.

Dr. Mabel Marrison, Academic Dean, reminisces about her past years at St. Mary's.

As Registrar, Thomas H. Johnson is plagued by changing schedules and dropped courses.

Despite his many duties as President, Dr. Frank Pisani manages to make time for his golf game.

Stimulates Student Body

St. Mary's rapid growth touches practically every phase of life here. Academically, there many exciting new courses. The faculty-student ratio is even smaller and more intimate than before. Broader social rules have encouraged students to assume more responsibility as they enjoy more freedom. And the new classroom building is so comfortable and well equipped that we eagerly anticipate the completion of the Dining Hall/Student Union and the Gymnasium.

St. Mary's Is Guided

Programs, services, and personnel increase as the school expands. But growth cannot preclude the people and activities necessary for the basic business of running a school.

In the Business Office, Mr. John Biggs, Mrs. Carol Ann Braughton, and Miss Frances Vann carefully tabulate the school budget.

Mrs. Barbara Bunch, Guidance Counselor willingly helps students with college applications. As St. Mary's representative, Sealy Cross travels to recruit new students.

Representing the Development Board, The Rev. Henry Witten, Miss Hilda Boyd, and Mr. John Bandesan study the architect's drawing of the new gym.

In the Admissions Office, Mrs. Mary Straud, Mrs. Linda McDaniels, Mrs. Laura Raynor, and Miss Charity Maady prepare transcripts and process applications.

Mrs. Diane Yeargen pauses in the midst of her many duties as Dr. Pisan's secretary.

In Her Expansion and Development

English Department

Progresses With Important Changes

The English Department has made many significant changes in the past year. The number of required hours in English has been reduced, the department faculty has been increased, and in addition, four new courses have been created. Due to the larger number of English teachers, classes are now smaller.

Mrs. Catherine Bornhort checks attendance in her high school class.

Chairman of the department, Mr. John Tote argues with Mrs. Noe over the use of the expletive.

Lecturing to her students, Miss Patricia Connelly points out the symbolism in The Catcher In the Rye.

Miss Ann Culley explains an assignment to Gray Moynord.

Relaxing in the faculty house between classes, Mr. Rebekah Gunn entertains her cat while preparing her lesson.

Miss Eileen Meredith looks out over front campus.

Mrs. Anne Noe reads Cleo a portion of John Donne's "The Flea."

Students Are Encouraged To Develop Proficiency In Foreign Languages

The aim of the Department of Foreign Languages is to enable the student to become familiar with a language other than his own. Besides teaching grammar and pronunciation, the instructors inform girls about the culture and civilization of the people whose language is being studied. This year the department has a greatly enlarged inventory of tapes. The laboratory is used both in class and by the students voluntarily.

Stressing accuracy, Mrs. Morguerite Cressman teaches her class correct French pronunciation.

Industriously, Miss Judith Oslack grades a pile of high school Spanish papers.

Mrs. Jessie Zepp engages in a friendly conversation with Mr. King in lower Smedes.

Mrs. Morjolijn Werman explains an interesting French artifact to her civilization class.

Amid piles of Spanish books and papers, Mr. Luis Pereira-Reyes works in the faculty workroom.

Monning controls in the language lab, Mrs. Doreen Saxe listens to the French tape with her class.

Mr. Stanley Serxner prepares his Spanish class for a test.

Thumbing through a foreign language magazine, Mrs. Jaan Cremin encourages a student to read French literature.

Social Studies Enhanced by New Courses

The most exciting event in this department was the mock political convention held on campus. Led by a new political science seminar, it encouraged student participation in the upcoming Presidential election. While some students studied Latin American and African politics, English and American History, and Western Civilization, Psychology and Sociology students delved into a study of the individual and his inter-personal relationships.

and a Mock Convention

Between his history classes, James Noel takes a break in the faculty workroom.

Mrs. Honnoh Scoggin returns sociology test papers before lecturing on family relationships.

Politician, historian, and clown, Mr. Don Roberts relaxes in the trunk of his car.

Miss Dione Ricks discusses with her psychology students the basic needs of an individual.

In her English history class, Mrs. Elgivo Watson lectures to her students on the Glorious Revolution.

On the way to her class, Mrs. Elgivo Watson lectures to her students on the Glorious Revolution.

On the way to her class, Mrs. Mortho Stoops converses with Clarke Brinkley.

Mr. Demetrios Nixon points out the relationship between supply and demand to an economics student.

Religion Courses Deepen Spiritual Insights While Mathematics Develops Logic.

Students taking religion courses study the Old Testament and early Christian writings. This year a new course in comparative religion was added. Instructors in religion enjoyed same inter-departmental action with the English, Social Studies, and Science Department.

The mathematics Department completely reorganized its curriculum to offer a wider variety of courses to students. The addition of a math course designed exclusively for those girls intending to teach in the elementary schools was the most significant change.

Math teacher, Mrs. Nancy Smith converses with a student.

In the Library, Miss Beth Mackie hopes to find new material to bring to her Bible class.

Listening to Mr. A. R. Lawrence, Becky Clark wonders if the Tin Lizzie operates on mathematic principles.

Mrs. Marlene Jeffries mimeographs tests for her math classes.

Explaining theorems to one of her math classes, Mrs. Elizabeth Farster teaches the basic concepts.

In spite of his demanding job as Chaplain and Bible professor, the Rev. Robert Hobgood finds time to play with his daughter, Susan.

Department of Natural

Using the skelton, Mrs. Georgette Compbell points out the sternum to her onotomy colss.

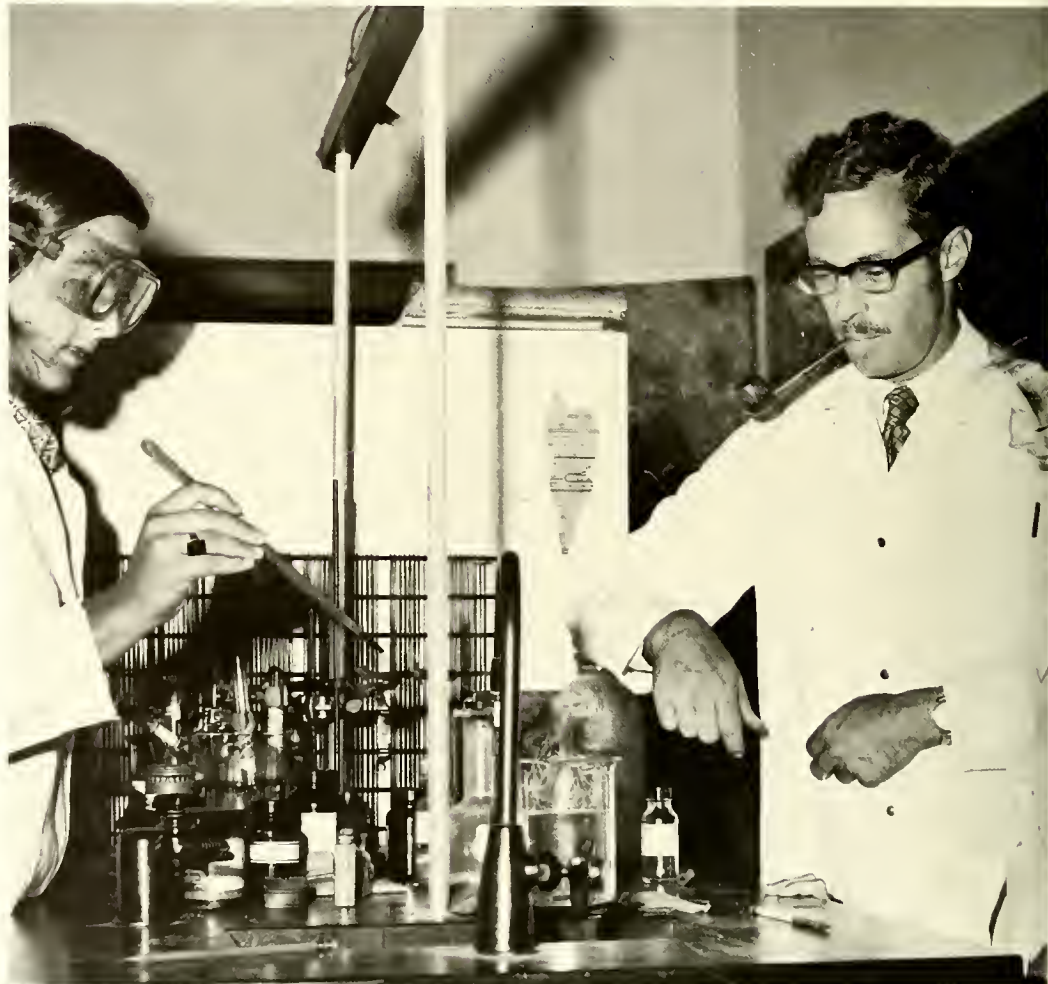

Teoching her biology lob, Mrs. Cotherine Fish uses slides to illustrote basic concepts to Anne Blockwell and Betty Jo Crews.

With o butterfly specimen, Miss Mory Oliver Ellington teaches Kotie Jo Lowrence to use the disecting microscope.

Waiting for the results of the reocotion, Mr. Jomie King ond Kothy Jordan observe the beoker.

Corefully, Mr. Jim Appleton sets up o physics lob experiment.

Chemistry teacher, Mrs. Alice Greiner, rides her bicycle to school each doy.

Sciences Expands Curriculum

The Science Department expanded its facilities and at the beginning of the spring semester 1971, opened two new laboratories for use. One was equipped for biology and the other for physics. A course in physics was offered to high school students, and a new instructor in chemistry was added to take care of the increased enrollment in the natural sciences.

Practicing the organ, Mr. Michael Bulley selects hymns for the chapel service.

Directing the Charale, Miss Geraldine Cate teaches them a new song to be used in the Father-Daughter Day program.

Interested students watch as Miss Margaret Underwood demonstrates art creations made with string.

Pausing between music classes, Mr. Donald Peery thinks through his schedule.

Art teacher, Mrs. Margaret Williams prepares a project for her next class.

Listening intently, Miss Mary Ruth Haig has one of her students play a Bach minuet.

Expression: Art and Music

While the study of art and music provides a means of communication, it also gives much pleasure to the individual. Art students experiment in using such mediums as string, tissue, yarn, and acrylics. In the Music Department, a new instructor was added to accomodate the increased enrollment of girls in musical study.

Development Program Includes New Facilities

Students enjoy the informal manner in which drama classes are taught. Some students help design sets, some experience the joy of improvisational acting in creating dramatics, and still others take part in the production of plays.

The Physical Education Department anxiously awaits the completion of their new gymnasium and natatorium. For the first time students are offered a course in snow skiing. Students can take a wide variety of courses to fulfill physical education requirements.

for Physical Education and Drama

Industriously, Emily Dackery and drama teacher, Mr. Harry Callahan paint a set for "Little Mary Sunshine."

Having just taught a new swimming skill, Miss Margaret Duncan observes a WSI student.

Patiently waiting, Mrs. Nancy Stamey hopes a breeze will come to carry her away like Mary Poppins.

Dance instructor, Miss Josephine Sutlive explains principles of movement to a class.

Smiling at the victors, Miss Lau Jones congratulates the winners of the Sigma-Mu softball game.
